Men around the world are embracing the benefits of a consistent skincare routine, and with that comes a greater interest in face masks. The transition between cleaning and serum application, masking can help address a wide range of skincare issues - think breakage, dryness or excess oil - in a targeted way. Because the formulas are on the skin for 10, 20, even 30 minutes at a time, the active ingredients really have a chance to get to work. There are many face masks that men can choose from, and the results are enough to prove that masking for men is not a passing trend, but rather here to stay. Below, we are sharing our list of the best face masks for men. This best-selling mask is ideal for concerns such as acne, redness and enlarged pores. This is thanks to its star ingredient blue tansy oil - a powerful anti-inflammatory that soothes the skin - which when combined with white willow bark and fruit enzymes gently exfoliates and re-emerges the skin. The light texture of the gel offers a subtle cooling sensation when applied; imagine how much better it would still feel if stored in the fridge. We just like it. If you are a passionate Byrdie reader, then you know that the team is a big fan of this budget-friendly clay mask. It has only one ingredient (bentonite clay) known for its detoxifying properties. Smooth this on your face to help decongest pores: it works like a spell. You could also use it on your body or hair or even mix it with apple cider vinegar for even stronger results. Long story short: it's a versatile clay tub you want in your closet: trust me. From the brand widely known for its products for male grooming comes this clay mask that does not skimp on the benefits. It uses a combination of kaolin and bentonite clay to clean deeply, while aloe leaf juice and witch hammock soothe and moisturize the skin. It's a detoxifying formula, so you can expect your skin to feel refreshed and super clean after use, with a smoother, more even-looking look. Although this mask on the convenient side, it is incredibly effective. This 10-minute peeling gel exfoliates to reveal smoother structured skin over time. Powerful glycolic, lactic acids and willows provide a powerful treatment for resurrecting rough and textured skin. Results are achieved without a large financial investment. This formula is only for night use and is not recommended for sensitive skin types. Suitable for normal skin types and ideal for dry skin users, this lightweight gel mask can be worn for 30 minutes and then dried. It can also be worn at night as a sleeping mask of the treatment that washes away in the morning. Its main ingredient is niacinamide, which has anti-inflammatory benefits, which control the oil and minimize pores. Bring balance to the combined and oily skin with this mineral clay mask. In 10-15 10-15 manages excess sebum, debris and congested unclogged pores. Natural kaolin and bentonite clays extract impurities while lecithin hydrates. This mask does the makeup without biting exosus on the skin. It leaves the skin without shine during the day and can be used several times a week. If you are dealing with breakouts on the normal, this sulfur-filled acne mask can help. Sulfur, an FDA-approved ingredient for acne treatment, eliminates acne-causing bacteria on the surface of the skin to treat existing eruptions and prevent new ones. All the while bentonite clay extracts excess oil and surface impurities from dirt, product and sweat accumulation. It's about a great tag team. For dull, dis bright skin, reach this exfoliating power plant formulated with a 20% acid complex. Harness the power of powerful AHA (glycolic acid) and BHA (salicylic acid) to gently exfoliate, unlock, and minimize the appearance of pores. The 20-minute treatment can be used once or twice a week. Soft's flagship mask has been specially made to add moisture and waist to dry, thirsty skin. Ginger and turmeric extracts add illuminating and anti-inflammatory properties while hyaluronic acid, niacinamide and squatanol provide lasting hydration. As a bonus, the creamy texture is not messy and easy to apply. Note: This is a rinse mask, but it can also be worn overnight for extra hydration. This mask dispenses like gel but turns into foam while you get to work. Key ingredients such as squalane and almond oil add moisture, while vitamins E and C offer antioxidant and illuminating benefits. In other words, thoroughly purify and cleanse the skin without sacrificing hydration. These sheet masks are designed specifically for men's faces, leaving out the lower half to avoid interfering with facial hair. It uses moringa leaf extract, cedar oil and baobab oil as the main ingredients, which work together to illuminate, even the skin tone, and reduce the appearance of imperfections. They're also super portable, so you can take them with you pretty much anywhere. This Hollywood secret is once an access point for dealing with problematic skin. The cream-structured mask removes dirt, toxins and excess oil thanks to activated charcoal. K-17 clay helps wash away the oil, while the mixture of six acids , including glycolytic, salicylic and lactic acids, exfoliates and refines the texture of the skin. The ingredients of this face mask read more like staples than mask ingredients (chlorella, spirulina, mango juice) but that's why we love its 100% pure formula at of edible superfoods. It's super clean, vegan and works really well to gently detoxify the skin, fend off breakouts and environmental damage, and reveal a overall healthy-looking complexion. While a face mask may not necessarily be a in your skincare routine in the same way, for example, it could be a cleanser or sunscreen, there is no denying that it is a very beneficial add-on. Packed with good ingredients for your skin, it's one of the easiest ways to give your complexion some extra TLC, statistics. (Not to mention that masking always makes for a great moment of self-care.) When it comes to finding the right formula, your options are, literally, endless. It doesn't matter if your complexion problem is stains, relaxation, dehydration, dullness (you get the image), there is a mask for it. In addition, you can also choose from a plethora of different sizes, ranging from disposable sheet masks to creams in a tube. The huge amount of choices can be overwhelming, so to make the process easier we narrowed the playing field to these better face masks. Read on to discover the best face masks out there and get ready for great leather days to come. At the risk of sounding hyperbolic, this is really one of the best skincare products we've ever used. It fuses a powerful concentration of alpha-hydroxy acids (25% of a glycolic, tartaric, lactic and citric combination) with 2% beta-hydroxy acid (salicylic). We know, it looks intense, but it worked wonders for anyone we know has ever tried it, even for those with sensitive skin. This is because the acid mixture is formulated with an ideal pH of 3.5 to minimize the likelihood of irritation, and the mask also comes with a vial of the brand's pure virgin marula oil to help further sooth the skin later. Use it once a week for 20 minutes and get ready to watch the skin change in front of your eyes. Clay is one of the best ingredients out there to absorb excess oil; this formula contains clay and only clay. More specifically, it is 100% natural calcium bentonite clay that has not been diluted or mixed with other ingredients. Mix it with water until you get the desired consistency, then leave it in water for up to 20 minutes to let it do its thing and thoroughly purify the pores. Also beautiful: It works great as a hair mask or body, as well as a bathroom or foot bath. If your complexion has some oily and some dry spots, reach this choice, on the recommendation of Byrdie's editorial director Faith Xue. It strikes the perfect balance of being detoxifying but moisturizing, it is not an easy feat. Spanish clay does detox tasks, pulling out unwanted gunks and dirt. At the same time, essential oils help moisturize the skin so that it does not look or feel undressed. Not to mention that all this happens in just 10 minutes. Ingredients Hyaluronic acid is a natural polysaccharide found in the human body. It acts as a cushioning and lubricating agent for our joints, nerves, hair, skin and eyes. When used in skin care, it acts as a moisture binder, which means that it will stick to water in cells (also attracting and holding water from the air) causing them to plump. Xue likes this exfoliating power plant for its smoothing and illuminating benefits. A top-notch trio alpha-hydroxy acid, beta-hydroxy acid and blue agave work in tandem, cleaning pores and optimizing cell turnover to keep the complexion bright. Meanwhile, hydrating hyaluronic acid and three different soothers (aloe, chamomile and Asian centella) ensure that the skin never dries red or irritated by such exfoliation. Key ingredients Sulfur is a natural element that is an essential component for all living cells. Sulfur-based products tend to work best for mild to moderate acne, mainly white dots, blackheads, and papules. Sulfur is one of the best anti-acne ingredients out there due to its anti-inflammatory benefits. The only problem? It smells terrible. But despite this formula contains a concentration of 3% sulfur, it actually smells good, only slightly citrusy. Combined with illuminating azelaic acid and protective green tea, it works fast to calm imperfections and lighten clinging pores. In our experience, it also made huge pimples and horns noticeably less obvious after just one 10-minute application. Despite the fact that this is called peel, you basically use it in the same way that I would make a mask, hence its appearance in this list. It is considered a peel because of how effective it is in combating hyperpigmentation, which is why it has gained a place on this list. The prominent ingredient is a new form of vitamin C derived from spirulina that is super pure and powerful, working to effectively combat stains and even out the skin tone every time you use it. There is also an antioxidant derived from blue algae in the formula for further illuminating benefits. The gel-like texture is nice to do, and while dyeing a little, it hasn't irritated our sensitive skin. The first thing you'll notice about this mask is how good it is to move on: creamy and innately refreshing, both relaxing and refreshing at the same time. Reach it whenever your skin is red or stressed; Arnica, marigold and Asian centella work in tandem to help calm irritation quickly. It is also tested by the dermatologist and fragrance-free, always important when dealing with sensitive skin. Talk about natural: this mask contains four certified organic ingredients and nothing else. Made with mango juice powder, marshmallow root extract, spirulina powder, and chlorella powder, this is essentially a green smoothie for your skin (and at that point, the ingredients are actually edible). It leaves your complexion clean and glowing, while, in true green smoothie form, it provides many essential antioxidants. DIY fans will also appreciate the fact that it comes as a powder designed to be mixed with water to create a gel-like texture; you can also water with yogurt or even honey. It might be this brand's P50 toner getting all the buzz, but Byrdie Senior Editor Hallie Gould says this mask is a sleeper hit. Using yeast extract, clay, lactic acid and witch hammock, it also gives the most clogged pores serious deep cleansing. Tip: You can mix in a small pinch of baking soda to help further improve detoxifying benefits. Gould is also a fan of the brand's Masque VIP 02; try mixing the two if the skin is slightly drier or more sensitive. We like this choice not only for the very affordable price, but also for the fact that, unlike many other pharmacy masks, it is made of a hydrogel material that will not fall from your face. As the name suggests, it is insanely moisturizing, thanks to a strong dose of hyaluronic acid that also has the added advantage of temporarily plumping the fine lines. Try using it before applying makeup for a smoother canvas. The main ingredient here is camel milk, yes, as in the desert animal. Keep your hump day jokes, because it's a legitimate skincare ingredient that's been used for centuries for its moisturizing and nourishing abilities. It is paired with vegetable oils to make this formula super moisturizing, although since camel milk is also a natural source of lactic acid, you get some exfoliation to help brighten the skin as well. If there is no time to mask during the day, reach for a night formula and simply use it instead of your night cream a couple of times a week. Ideally, make it this choice that offers some serious anti-aging benefits. It contains bakuchiol, a plant-based ingredient that works almost exactly like retinol when it comes to counteracting wrinkles and spots, but has none of the same irritating side effects. There are many (and we mean many) big clay masks out there, but this is a staple of Team Byrdie. The formula uses a French green clay, just as effective as other clays, slightly more delicate on the skin, and combines it with a litany of antioxidant-rich and moisturizing ingredients. Winner of our Eco Beauty Awards 2020, it is always a great choice for clean beauty queens. I'm sorry, but all the excuse I don't have time to make the face mask won't fly anymore. When time is essential, slather on this mask, which does the job in just 30 seconds. In fact, the longest you should leave it on is only three minutes; adjust your time according to the sensitivity of your skin. It contains a list of alpha and beta-hydroxy acids along with plant-based exfoliating beads to leave the skin smoother and brighter. It's our access point every time we're getting ready (and running) but suddenly we realize that our complexion looks a bit blah. Lindsey Metrus, Senior Editor at Byrdie, is a fan of this new brand (as well as celebrities like Gabrielle Union and Ashley Greene) that makes masks and sunglasses. There are five variants to choose from, each with four active ingredients and with a specific concern: illuminating, deep cleansing, calming and illuminating. Get five masks in each pack: there is also a variety pack that features one of each if you want to take them all for a test. Made with an innovative hydrogel material, they remain put and do not slip on the face, and are also fully compostable. This mask originally caught our attention to the innovative dispensing system; each package is equipped with six solid floral-shaped tablets that mix with water. It's an interesting concept (and one that makes this option very travel-friendly) but it's not just deceptive. Our reviewer found that the formula provided all the purifying benefits of a clay mask, but did not leave the skin too dry or stripped. This is not, we repeat it is not, a free pass to go ahead and get sunburned, but we get it: some days you just have a little too much sun on your face, despite your best sunscreen efforts. These are moments like these when you'll love having this relaxing mask at your fingertips, another of Xue's beans. They are not only the noteworthy ingredients - moisturizing hyaluronic acid, lenite chamomile and arnica - but the mask itself. The exclusive biocellulose material preserves and provides a greater amount of such ingredients. the result? Skin calmed and soothed in just 15 minutes. For lighter, smoother skin as soon as possible, reach for this powder mask. Its formula, rich in superfoods, vegetable botanicals and clay, detoxifies, moisturizes and smoothes the complexion after a single application. It is also cruelty-free and made without parabens, phosphates and sulfates. To use it, just mix half a tablespoon of powder with the same amount of water (or slightly less), apply it with the included brush and leave it up for 20-40 minutes. Rinse with warm water to reveal radiant skin. According to our Diversity Pledge, 15% of the products in our newly published market roundups will feature black and/or black property brands. At the time of publication, we were unable to find the number of face masks from owned and/or black-founded companies needed to meet this percentage. If you know one that we should consider, please send us uncontact@byrdie.com and we will evaluate the product as soon as possible. Asap.
